Skid Chains For Driving In Snow Advised By CPH

Planning a trip to the snow? In case you are, the California Highway Patrol has some helpful suggestions intended to add enjoyment and safety to the trip. "First," emphasizes Commissioner B. R. Caldwell of the Patrol, "be sure you include a set of skid chains in the car and pack them where they can be easily reached when you arrive in snow country. "When you reach a sign stating 'chains advised' you have reached a logical spot to stop your car and put on the chains. It is very probable that you will find another sign not too far up the road which will announce 'chains required.' This road unless the car is equipped with chains," Caldwell said. "Motorists are warned that even with chains an automobile is difficult to control on ice or snow if operated at speeds that would be reasonable on dry pavements."

"Another definite hazard in the snow areas is slick ice," continued the commissioner, "This is caused by alternate thawing and freezing and is usually found in shaded areas. Watch for these spots and slow down before hitting them. Whatever you do, don't apply the brakes while traveling over such areas, and if your car does start to skid, turn the front wheels in the direction of the skid. "Enjoy the snow areas of our state but remember, driving conditions are much different than experienced in your normal driving," he concluded.
